Information workers waste 21.3% of an organization's total productivity

A white paper published by International Data Corporation (IDC) in 2012, estimates that information workers waste 21.3% of an organization's total productivity. In monetary terms, this equals a whopping $19,732 / year per knowledge worker.

By introducing a smarter document production process for your knowledge workers, whether they work locally, globally or virtually – you can be more efficient, work more securely and increase quality.
